Billy Farrell (footballer) Billy Farrell was an Irish footballer who played as a left half in the Football League for Notts County. Personal life Farrell was born in Enniscorthy, County Wexford in 1885. He was the eldest son of William Farrell, a cattle merchant, from a long line of Irish players on the Wexford club side. He died in Workington, Cumbria, in 1966. Career He began his football career with local side, St. Mary's, before joining Wexford United in 1905, and making seven League appearances in the 1905–06 season. He made just one League appearance for the club, scoring once against Belfast Celtic, in the 1904–05 League season, before returning to his native Ireland to play with his father's side for a season. He then returned to the Football League with Notts County, where he was a regular left half for two seasons in the 1908–09 and 1909–10 seasons. He made six League appearances in the 1908–09 season and scored one goal in a 2–0 win against Stoke City on 14 September 1908. In the 1909–10 season, he made six League appearances, but played in nine Football League FA Cup ties for County, scoring once. His other goal came in the fourth qualifying round against Boston Town. He remained with Notts County until 1912, playing in 40 League games, as well as two FA Cup ties and one FA Charity Shield. At the end of the 1912–13 season, he returned to Ireland and joined another senior side, Ballymena United. He played with the club for one season, until his retirement from football in August 1913.
